Death claimed the fourth victim of the auto accident east of Gettysburg on the Lincoln highway early Thursday morning when Cpl. Robert Lewis Spahr, 22, son of Mrs. Bertha Spahr, 168 York street, died at the Warner hospital Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Others killed in the accident included:

Marine Sgt. John Dale Kuhn, 21, veteran of Pacific campaigns who arrived home late Wednesday afternoon on leave and expected his discharge in two weeks after nearly three years of service.

Joseph Francis Slonaker, 22, 42 Breckenridge street, former army staff sergeant who was discharged last October after two and a half years with the Signal Corps here and in Europe.

In Army Three Years
Russell Knight Bumbaugh, 22, Gettysburg R. 5, discharged veteran of 15 naval engagements in the Atlantic and Pacific.

Spahr suffered cerebral concussion, fractured skull and multiple abrasions and contusions.

Corporal Spahr was born in Gettysburg, a son of Mrs. Bertha Spahr and the late Raymond Spahr. He attended grade school here and graduated from Gettysburg high school in 1942. He was a member of St. James Lutheran church and the Albert J. Lentz post of the American Legion.

Services on Tuesday

Inducted on February 10, 1943, at New Cumberland, Spahr was sent to Miami Beach, Fla., for six weeks of basic training. Later he was transferred to the Air Corps Technical school at Chanute Field, Ill., after which he was sent to Peterson Field, Colo. He was sent to India June 4, 1945, where he flew the famous "hump." After returning to the United States, December, 1945, he re-enlisted for a three-year period and was scheduled to report at Ft. Meade, Md., on March 3.

In addition to his mother he is survived by two brothers and a sister, James H., Jeanne and Raymond W., all at home; the paternal grandfather, L. H. Spahr, Gettysburg, and maternal grandfather, Irvin Riggs, New York city.

Mr. Shetter made an urgent appeal for volunteers to help with the packing and counting of the donated clothing in the collection center in the Epley building, South Washington street. Mr. Shetter will pack clothes this afternoon and Sunday afternoon.

More donations of clothing are arriving daily at the local center. New Oxford and York Springs communities conducted special drives this week.

JUDGE LAUDS WAR EFFORTS OF COUNTIANS

Adams county swung easily into the war effort and is reconverting to peacetime activities just as swiftly, Judge W. C. Sheely told returned veterans and others attending the homecoming program held by the Order of Independent Americans Friday evening.

The judge outlined the great work done both by the men in service and those on the home front during the war, citing the distinguished record of the local men and women who took part in the various volunteer organizations, and those who worked long hours to produce the food and goods needed by the armies and in supplying the money needed for the war.

The returned veterans are fitting their lives smoothly into the civilian pursuits and the county has been foremost in its efforts to aid the veterans, he pointed out. It was one of the first counties to establish a Veterans Affairs office, among other activities.

A memorial service for Pfc. Willis Baker, a member of the local O. of I. A. who died in the war was read by Luther Shryock, chaplain of the organization.

Tell Experiences

Letters from Lt. Col. Wilbur Plank, Springs avenue, and Sgt. Robert Dougherty, members of the club who were not able to be present for the homecoming, were read while the following members who served during World War II told of their experiences: Sgt. Edgar McDonnell, Cpl. Kenneth Kessler, Pfc. Clair Fissel and Cpl. Gilbert Elker.

Soldier sons of seven members were introduced. They included F. I. C. Francis Schultz, son of Dorsey Schultz; MAM 2/C Richard L. Fox, son of Emory Fox; Pfc. Melvin Spence, son of Bernard Spence; Pvt. Millard Stull, son of Simon Stull; T. Sgt. Clyde Little, son of Harry Little; T/4 Paul Little, son of Edmund Little and Capt. Francis Snyder, son of J. E. Snyder.

John McDonnell was chairman of the committee in charge of the program which opened with group singing and devotions led by the Rev. Howard S. Fox, pastor of Trinity Reformed church. A quartet comprising Mrs. Donald Fissel, Mrs. Donald Myers, Donald Myers and Paul Snyder sang several numbers.

Mrs. Clyde Little presented several vocal solos. Miss Alice Snyder accompanied the singers at the piano.

Methodists To Mark Race Relations Day

The second service in the four "Good Neighbor Institute" services will be observed Sunday evening at the Methodist church here when the Rev. R. M. Everett, pastor of the A. M. E. Zion church, will preach and his choir will bring special music. The offering will go to the support of their work in Gettysburg. The service is in observance of Race Relations Day.

At the morning service, Robert Washington, a negro from New Cumberland, who has won recognition for his singing, will be the soloist. The Junior choir which was organized and is being directed by Miss Louise Spangler, minister of music, will make its first appearance. They will sing, "Walking With Jesus."

The pastor, will speak on the theme: "An Understanding Heart."

Vote Contribution To Memorial Fund

The Gettysburg WCTU held its monthly meeting Friday night at the home of Mrs. Emory Zepp, East Middle street. The theme of the meeting was the Frances Willard Memorial and the local unit voted its annual contribution to that fund.

Mrs. Zepp was in charge of the devotions. The visit and treat for the county home patients was reported. Gifts included oranges, cakes, buns and candy. Articles were read on Frances Willard. A social hour followed the business session.

The March meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Milton Remmel.

SERVICES TODAY FOR TWO VETS SLAIN IN CRASH

The crash of rifles over the grave in St. Mary's cemetery, McSherrystown, and the slow notes of taps brought to an end this morning the military rites for Joseph Francis Slonaker, 22, 42 Breckenridge street, returned World War II veteran who died Thursday morning in an auto accident two miles east of here on the Lincoln highway.

First of the four veterans who died in the crash to be buried, the former Signal Corps staff sergeant's body was carried into St. Francis Xavier Catholic church this morning between lines of uniformed men for the requiem mass sung by the Rev. Fr. Mark Stock preceding the burial at McSherrystown.

Making up the firing squad from the State Guard company here were: Sgt. George Bushman, Sgt. Curtis Stoner, Sgt. George Naugle, Cpl. Kermit Dearthoff, Sgt. Raymond Menges and Sgt. George Coshun. The American Legion color guard included Harry Laughman, Donald Smith, and Clayton and Arthur Warman. Members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars color guard were Willard Weikert, Samuel Kessel, Julius Swope, George Mitchell and Robert Thompson, Jr. Captain C. Arthur Brame commandant of the local Guard unit was in command of the group with M. Sgt. Raymond Strohm directing the VFW color guard. Sgt. W. L. Baldwin, a Spanish-American war veteran blew taps.

Kuhn Rites This Afternoon
Palbearers for the Slonaker funeral included Harry Bender, Richard Naugle and S. Sprankle of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and George Redding, Robert Thompson and Harry Bream of the American Legion. Slonaker was a son of Frank J. and Anna L. Keefe Slonaker, Breckenridge street, and served 2½ years in the army.

This afternoon at 2 o'clock final services will be held for Marine Sgt. John Dale Kuhn, son of Charles E. and Mary E. (Mickley) Kuhn, Cashtown, killed in the same accident Thursday.

The services will be held from the Kuhn home in Cashtown with the Rev. John Ehrhart, his pastor, officiating. Interment will be made in Fiohr's cemetery. The palbearers for Sergeant Kuhn will also be veterans of World War II: Donald Cole, Glenn Horner, Grover Thompson, Gervus Currens, Harry Bream and Edwin Shoap.

Sergeant Kuhn had expected to receive his discharge in a month after spending nearly three years in service. He was home on a 36-hour leave when the accident occurred.

Bumbaugh Rites Monday

Services for Russell Knight Bumbaugh, 22, Gettysburg R. 5, son of Clarence E. and Marian E. (Craig) Bumbaugh, also killed in the accident, will be held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Bender funeral home with the Rev. Floyd A. Carroll officiating.

Interment will be made at the National cemetery where the VFW and Legion color guards and State Guard firing squad will meet the funeral procession at the gates of the cemetery and escort the body to the grave.

State police investigating the crash said they now have established the fact that Kuhn was the driver and that Slonaker occupied the front seat with him. Both were killed outright.

Sgt. Logan's Life Saved Many Times Back Of Nazi Lines By Dog's Keen Senses

Somewhere in Italy Sgt. Logan (left) took time out to pose with "Duke" beside the tent that housed the sergeant, the dog and the visiting soldier shown in the picture. The dog constantly stayed near the sergeant and during air raids insisted on sharing the same foxhole.

Operating two to two and a half miles behind the German lines in Italy "Duke," collie dog owned by Mervin H. Gardner, Jr., Harrisburg, saved the life of Sgt. James Robert Logan, 22½ Chambersburg street, on numerous occasions.

Duke's ability to detect the presence of Germans and their installations not only saved the life of the local soldier, but the lives of many others, according to Logan. The keen-nosed ability of the Harrisburg dog allowed Sergeant Logan to lead "innumerable" reconnaissance patrols behind the enemy lines, more patrols than were conducted by any other man in the 37th Infantry Dog Platoon, and thus won for Logan the Bronze Star for gallantry in action.

And best of all—according to Sergeant Logan, now Mr. Logan and home after 2½ years of service in the U. S. Army—Duke may soon be with his soldier master as a civilian. Immediately after his discharge from service Logan went to Harrisburg to visit the dog, which like himself had received a discharge from the service. Duke's master is planning to allow the dog to come to Gettysburg, and stay with Logan at the Bob Bell dog training farm where Logan worked for six years before entering service and plans to continue the training of dogs as his life work.

Tough on Enemy

Sent first to Camp Lee for basic training in the Quartermaster Corps, Logan was transferred to Fort Robinson, Neb., where the army was training its K-9 corps. From September, 1943, to May, 1944, he worked as a dog trainer, training attack dogs for Coast Guard installations and sentry dogs for Air Corps duty.

SAY GETTYSBURG NEEDS 100 MORE HOUSING UNITS

A tightening of the housing shortage here was predicted today by local real estate agents.

They also added that rents—particularly rentals of apartments—will continue to rise, although none looked forward to a general increase of all rents.

Gettysburg needs at least 100 more housing units—houses or apartments—if it is to meet the demands of all who want homes now or will need them in the near future, according to a consensus of the agents. One set the figure as high as 200 homes, another said that 50 or 60 new homes would "ease the situation tremendously, although it probably would not make homes available to all who want them." Most of the homes are needed in the $25 to $30 a month rental class with one agent saying that about 60 houses of that type are needed.

Population Gains Larger

One of the reasons given for the shortage of housing is that Gettysburg has not kept pace with its population increases over the past decade. Hundreds of youths have married and have sought homes while many of the older folk have continued to retain their homes.

During the last four years few homes were built in the community due to the lack of materials and workers brought about by the war. Last year construction permits were

BOIES PENROSE

By LEIGHTON C. TAYLOR
Secretary to the Late Senator Boies Penrose

During 1921 Senator Penrose, regardless of his physical condition, greatly enjoyed his work in the Senate, and his relations with Harding and his administration were unusually pleasant and agreeable. A tragic note was struck in the sudden death of Penrose's colleague, Senator Knox. It will be remembered that Senator Johnson refused to take second place on a proposed ticket with Knox. Assuming that such a ticket could have been nominated and elected, Johnson would have succeeded to the Presidency, just as he would have done had he accepted the Vice-Presidential nomination with Harding. This determination of Johnson to brush aside any proposed ticket was chargeable, according to our friend, King, to Mrs. Johnson. King, writing to Senator Penrose after the convention, had this to say: "I continued my negotiations with Hiram Johnson all through the convention in the hope that he would align himself with Knox as his running mate. He said that he wouldn't run second place with anybody; that he had been invited to run as Vice-President with every presidential candidate, and that, under no circumstances, would he advocate the nomination of anybody but himself. I think, Senator, that Johnson is largely influenced by his wife because once, when I was in conference alone with him on the question of going on a ticket with Knox, Mrs. Johnson came into the room and said: 'Hiram, you must never be the wheel-horse for anybody; you must be nominated yourself, or else let the ticket elect itself.'"

White House Guest

President and Mrs. Harding went out of their way to be kind and gracious to Senator Penrose. His last social function outside his own apartment was a private dinner at the White House with the President and Mrs. Harding, and which he greatly enjoyed. I had acquainted Mrs. Harding with his favorite dishes and she prepared them herself.

The Senator's last visit to the Capitol was on Christmas Eve. I was there, and he personally acknowledged the receipt of some Christmas greetings and presents from relatives and friends. When

JAIL WALL TROUBLE

CORONER'S JURY UNABLE TO FIX CRASH BLAME

A coroner's jury Friday afternoon was unable to place blame for the accident early last Saturday morning on the Emmitsburg road in which two Emmitsburg women were fatally injured.

The verdict, returned about 5 o'clock at the court house after an hour of testimony from 12 witnesses, simply stated the jury believed both drivers had been blinded by bright headlights and concluded: "There is no evidence by which responsibility for the accident can be fixed."

The inquest, the second here this week in fatal traffic accidents, was conducted by Dr. C. G. Crist, Adams county coroner.

Fitez Car Overturned

Testimony Friday showed that each driver had complained to passengers about the bright lights on the other's car, that each car had been traveling at 40 to 45 miles an hour and that each driver had been in his proper lane of traffic as the machines approached each other.

The car operated by Lloyd S. Fitez, 43, West Main street, Emmitsburg, ran off the edge of the highway after the left fronts of the two cars sideswiped and overturned after striking a concrete abutment. Mrs. Fitez and Mrs. Emanuel Kump, Emmitsburg R. 2, were riding in the rear seat. Mrs. Fitez was dead when she reached the hospital and Mrs. Kump died a short time later.

The other car, operated by William Coston, Columbia, Pa., ran off the highway, through a fence and came to a stop against a tree without injuring any of its seven occupants. The Emmitsburg couples were returning home after spending the evening at the Moose home here. The young people in the other car were coming home from a dance at Barlow.

Officer Testifies

Pvt. Frank Yercavage of the Gettysburg substation of the state police was the first witness. He exhibited photos made at the scene by a state police photographer and said the indications were the collision occurred about the middle of the highway. The crash occurred on a straight level stretch near the Sherry house.

The officer quoted both drivers as telling him they were almost blinded by bright lights and had commented to their companions on their difficulty in seeing the roadway. Each driver said he had lowered the beam of his own lights but that the other failed to do so.

The officer said each driver had given him approximate speed as 40 to 45 miles an hour. Each driver exercised his constitutional rights and declined to testify at the inquest. Mr. Fitez was represented by Attorney E. V. Bullett.

"Not Intoxicated"

The state policeman said Coston showed no signs of having been drinking. Fitez admitted having had some beer at the Moose home but Yercavage stated that when he saw Fitez later at the hospital he "couldn't tell if he was intoxicated."

Dr. Bruce N. Wolff of the hospital staff, described the victims' injuries and stated definitely that Fitez was "not intoxicated when I saw him."

Charles Dillman and Bernard Frazer, Gettysburg, Coston's front seat companions, testified briefly. They agreed to the estimate of Coston's speed but each said he had been driving carefully and had not been drinking. Both spoke of the bright lights on the Fitez car and Frazer insisted Coston was driving at the right edge of the road.

Crowds are inspecting the Adams County Photographic Exhibit in the Gettysburg National bank today after the display had won favorable comments from those who examined the exhibition at its formal opening Friday evening.

The display will be open to 2:30 o'clock this afternoon and again from 7 to 8:30 o'clock this evening. On Sunday it will be open from 2 to 4:30 p. m. In addition to regular banking hours, the show will be open next week on Friday evening and will close Sunday, February 17.

In addition to the display of 112 amateur photographs, the members of the photographic society have more than 100 prints on exhibition.

A correction in the list of prize winners in the show was announced today at the bank. Second prize in the small photograph division has been won by Mrs. P. W. Edwards, Gettysburg R. 4, instead of by John Parker, Gettysburg, as was first announced. A mix-up in the numbers of two prints caused the error in the first list of winners. Print No. 59 won the second award and is marked with a red ribbon.

Jap General In Tears As Trial Ends

Manila, Feb. 9 (AP)—The war crimes trial of Lt. Gen. Masaharu Homma ended today in its fifth week with the Japanese defendant, erstwhile conqueror of Manila, Bataan and Corregidor, in tears.

The prosecution demanded that the general, accused of ordering the Bataan death march, be given the same sentence as his military contemporary, Lt. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita—death on the gallows.

What fate the U. S. military commission has in store for him likely will be made known Monday.

Called "Man of Peace"

In civilian attire, the general who once barked surrender orders to Gen. Jonathan Wainwright, wept openly as Maj. John Sken, of Baltimore, chief of defense counsel said: "Should his life be taken, the world would lose a man devoted to peace."

These were the big charges flung at homma by the prosecution and the answers of the defense:

Charge 1—Homma was responsible for the 1942 march to prison of Bataan's surrendered Americans and Filipinos during which thousands were tortured and died. Answer by Capt. George W. Ott, Wilmette, Ill.—The Japanese, short on transportation, had to handle "many more prisoners of war than anticipated" and mistreatment resulted from the "whims" of individual guards—not Homma.

Unnecessary Slaughter

Charge 2—Homma unnecessarily slaughtered defenders on Corregidor island in Manila Bay after the fall of Bataan by continuing his artillery fire after the white flag was run up. Answer by Capt. Frank Coder, Somerset, Pa.—"The only testimony we have in this regard is that of Col. John R. Pugh, of Washington, (General) Wainwright's aide on the island, that 'I saw three fresh dead about three o'clock on the afternoon after the white flag was run up and I attributed them to artillery fire.'"

Charge 3—Homma's planes bombed Manila after General MacArthur declared it an open city in the last days of 1941. Answer by Lt. Robert Peiz, New York—Fifty American-Filipino trucks, laden with troops and explosives, allegedly moved through Manila's streets two days after the declaration, making the city in fact not an open city.

The attorneys said testimony of butchery attributed to Japanese soldiers was "stretching the theory of command responsibility."

BULLETINS

Cairo, Feb. 9 (AP)—More than fifty Egyptian students and several police were injured today when fighting broke out during a mass demonstration in which students surged through the streets of Cairo shouting "To the Revolt" and "Down With Britain."

The demonstration started after a mass meeting protesting against the recent British reply to Egypt's request for revision of the 1936 British-Egyptian Treaty.

Washington, Feb. 9 (AP)—President Truman's recommendations for the greatest house-building program in history won immediate and enthusiastic bi-partisan support today on Capitol Hill.

Democrats and Republicans alike applauded the objectives of the emergency campaign which has set its sights on the construction of 2,700,000 new homes in the next two years.

Lancaster, Pa., Feb. 9 (AP)—The majority of Lancaster county citizens for the fourth consecutive day were forced to walk to work as a strike continued to disrupt operations of the Conestoga Transportation company.

Washington, Feb. 9 (AP)—The War department jolted Congress today by coming out against creation of a separate air force.

Legislation to set up an independent air arm, army leaders told Congress, won't work.

New York, Feb. 9 (AP)—The most drastic system of fuel oil rationing in the history of New York city was ordered today by Mayor William O'Dwyer after tugboat workers rejected for the second time proposals to end their harbor strike.

Lewisburg, Pa., Feb. 9 (AP)—Two days after the U. S. House of Representatives heard a House Judiciary committee report describe him as an "evil and wicked judge," former federal judge Albert W. Johnson recinded his waiver of a $10,000-a-year full-pay pension because he was "in need of the money."

MARTIN TO BE CANDIDATE FOR SEAT IN SENATE

By MARTIN BRACKBILL

Harrisburg, Feb. 9 (AP)—Governor Edward Martin, according to GOP demands, agreed to run for the U. S. Senate and Republican leaders immediately moved today to iron out differences on the rest of the 1946 slate.

The 66-year-old executive made his announcement in a 45-word statement which he read in a slow, deliberate voice at a special news conference late yesterday. The decision ended speculation in and out of party circles that had lasted more than a year.

"After careful and deliberate consideration, I have decided to be a candidate for the U. S. Senate," he stated.

"This is a critical period in our nation's history. If the citizens of Pennsylvania feel that I can be of service, I am willing to accept the responsibility."

GOVERNOR MARTIN

Others Mentioned

The decision will pit the Keystone Governor, unable by law to succeed himself, against U. S. Senator Joseph P. Guffey next November, should both receive their respective party nominations.

Guffey, here to attend slate-making talks by Democrats Thursday, said announcement of his primary plans will be made simultaneously here and in Washington over the week-end. Today is the first day for circulating nomination petitions.

Martin, asked if he anticipated any opposition at the Republican primary May 21, said "that's something nobody can tell."

Former Republican Senator James J. Davis has been reported considering trying a come-back and Lewis J. Hines, former state secretary of labor and industry and now an American Federation of Labor official took out blank petitions for Davis for the senate. Davis ran for Governor against Martin four years ago in the GOP primary.

The Governor, who never has lost an election, withheld comment on his primary campaign plans and said he will "make no spurge so far as nomination papers are concerned," in addition to governor, he has been auditor general and state treasurer.

Committee To Meet

Martin retired from the army in 1942 with the rank of major general to run for governor. He commanded Pennsylvania's 28th Division in the early stages of its training for World War II and is a veteran of the Spanish-American and World War I.

GOP State Chairman M. Harvey Taylor, who described Martin's decision as "wonderful" news, announced he will reconvene the party's executive committee soon.

The committee was recessed last week pending word from Martin. At that time, Taylor said that when it met again, sentiment for candidates for other places on the party's slate would be reviewed.

Martin, himself, who said recently that if he runs, "I will run on a slate and support that slate," withheld comment on whom his running-mate will be.

"There's lots of time yet on that," he explained.

MAROONS HALT TROJANS WITH 32-27 VICTORY

Off to a 12-0 lead in the first six minutes of play, Gettysburg high school's eagles halted the 12-game winning streak of Chambersburg, defending South Penn and District 3 PIAA champion, here Friday evening before an over-flow crowd of approximately 1,200 fans.

The Maroons won 32-27 after 32 minutes of bitter and hotly contested basketball. Coach Forney's lads led the whole way and the closest the Trojans got was early in the third period when they cut the Maroons' lead to 18-15.

The victory marked the seventh in a row for the locals and their 11th in 13 starts. For Chambersburg it marked their second reverse in 14 tries.

As a result of the victory the Maroons now have an excellent chance to tie for the lead in the southern division. Waynesboro and Hanover must be met on foreign courts by Gettysburg while the Trojans face only Hanover at Chambersburg. A clean sweep for the locals and a Trojan win will make a playoff necessary.

Brilliant Start

The Forney-men were red hot in the opening minutes of play when they gave a dazzling display of floor work and shooting which threatened to make the game a rout. It took just 20 seconds before Rasmussen landed a shot from beneath the hoop. Gorman soon landed a one-hander and when Gorman tossed in a long shot the Trojans called for time after less than two minutes had expired. Chambersburg's man-for-man defense proved easy for Gettysburg and on the resumption of play Rasmussen cut beneath the hoop for a twin-pointer. Heintzelman followed with a long shot. After Sellers blew two free tosses, Gorman landed a one-hander. After six minutes of play Palmer looped a foul for the visitors' first score and 44 seconds later Young connected on a long toss. Just before the period ended Palmer broke loose for a "peep" and Gettysburg led 12-5 at the quarter.

Chambersburg shifted into a zone defense and the Maroons contented themselves with moving the ball around in midcourt with an occasional long shot which the Trojans usually managed to secure off the backboard. After over a minute Hess landed a free throw which was followed by a side shot by Sellers. Rasmussen retaliated with a lay-up before Young looped a foul. Gillespie netted a one-hander which Rasmussen duplicated. Rasmussen and Sellers matched fouls and just before the half ended Sellers scored a short shot to cut the Gettysburg lead to 18-13.

Stalling Tactics

Young's one-hander opened the third period but the Maroons recovered nicely on a long shot by Gorman and a dribble-in by the same lad. Heintzelman netted a foul before Gillespie scored on a charity toss. Palmer got free for an easy goal after five minutes had elapsed. Rasmussen's goal was the only score the remainder of the quarter as the Maroons toyed with the ball and the Trojans refused to come out of their zone-style of play. Going into the final period the Forney-men led 25-18.

Gorman, Heintzelman and Leisher netted fouls to start the final frame. Young cut the Maroon lead on a short shot as the Maroons called time to recover after Palmer was fouled. Palmer converted and the Maroons smothered the threat when Hess scored from beneath the hoop and added a foul when he was fouled. Rasmussen twirled a nice toss through which sewed up the contest as the Maroons' lead went to 32-22 with a little over three minutes remaining. Sellers scored on a one-hander. The teams battled furiously beneath the hoops for possession of the ball with the result that Leisher and Sellers drew three free tosses and tallied on each as the game ended.

All Play Well

Each of the Maroons played a grand brand of ball. Rasmussen, Hess and Rasmussen were giants under the cords while Gorman and Heintzelman were outstanding in back-court work. Rasmussen played one of his best games, looping five goals while holding the high-scoring Leisher to but a pair of fouls. Gettysburg's strong defense was a feature of the game. The Trojans also played fine ball with Young being outstanding.

Bill Ridinger's Jayvees turned in another commendable performance to score a surprisingly easy 28-17 victory in the preliminary. From start to finish the Maroons held a comfortable lead.

The Harrisburg Catholic high school five turned back the Delone Catholic team of McSherrystown in a Central Pennsylvania Catholic high school league basketball game played in Harrisburg Friday night, winning by a score of 58 to 25. Tony Balzina led the scoring attack for the winners, turning in 22 points.

After one period of play Coach Joe Stettino's Harrisburg team held a 15 to 8 lead and at half-time it was ahead by a 31 to 16 margin.

Harrisburg has played five league games this season, winning four of them. In its last eight games it has scored seven victories.

The Harrisburg reserves were winners in an opening contest on the program, defeating Delone by a 35 to 15 count.

Today's Talk
By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS
THE YEARS BETWEEN

There are books that I started to read many years ago, and failed to finish. Later I took them up and read them with the keenest enjoyment. Talking to a friend, recently, I mentioned this, and he said he had the same experience.

The fact is that between the early years of our lives and the later ones we develop, grow and become more appreciative, and richer in understanding. That is why we turn to the old things and see in them what we failed to see earlier. The years between them are the rich years of our lives, because we accumulate experience and understanding then.

A very cultured and learned man, who has been a friend of mine for many years, told me this last summer that he read little now but poetry. Being over eighty years of age, he said this reading helped to round out his life, after so many years of enjoyment in the reading of other literature. The years between seemed to prepare him for this appreciation.

Many of the great books of the world I have read during these years between, and although I regret not reading them before, still, regardless, I am sure I gain a greater thrill, for my experience has prepared me for a fuller appreciation. Yet there are books that grow dearer to one the more times they are read!

We have passed by potential friends early in life that we have met later, regretting that we didn't take advantage of all the years between.

Kipling wrote a book that he called "The Years Between." These are the most productive and creative of all the years of our lives, and perhaps the most important. That is one reason why none of them should be wasted. They serve us later in life, and perhaps an endless number of others.

Our choicest memories cluster in the years between. Our mentality is freshest then. It is then that the richest harvest of our efforts ripen. Love is keenest then, for it understands better. And we are more tolerant in every way. These years between are like a beautiful, fertile, and productive valley between the bordering heights.

How's That Battery
Now that we have plenty of gas for keeping the battery on charge we should look deeper if the battery fails to stay up. One of the things to be considered is the possibility of sticky points in the voltage regulator. This condition has two effects: it prevents the battery from getting the benefit of full charging, and it permits leakage of current back into the generator with a good chance of damaging the latter.

Caution on De-Sludging
I have been throwing out broad hints here and there to the effect that it pays to think twice before dosing an old engine with sludge remover. Now I think I had better come out with a full-dress blast against the notion that all you have to do to get rid of a lot of engine sludge is to pour a few quarts of solvent into the crankcase and call it a day. What you would do in most cases would be to call it a repair bill.

One reader tells me that he dosed his 1941 engine and got in return a burned out bearing and a lot of other trouble. Finally he had to do what he should have done in the first place: dropped the engine pan and cleaned out the sludge manually. By over-dosing the engine he simply stirred up all the muck at once and set it circulating around the small passages of the oiling system. Chemical desludging is all right to keep clean motors clean, or to finish off a manual cleaning, or in moderation to put some sludge into circulation so it can be drained off before adding new oil.

What They're Saying
Streamlining got a brush-off at a recent meeting of engineers when William B. Stout, widely known for his vision and logic, said that one of the false assumptions in car design is that streamlining, per se, is effective on ground vehicles. According to Stout it adds nothing to the performance of a motor vehicle, even though it may be very valuable in aircraft design. From Henry M. Crane, past president of the Society of Automotive Engineers, comes the news that gear shift controls were on the steering columns as early as 1904, but went out of the picture because transmissions themselves were not sufficiently improved. The now popular "shot peening" process for strengthening stressed parts was also traced back to the village blacksmith who used topeen leaf springs, according to engineer William S. James.

Mechanic Joe Speaking:
"Many customers who know that if the engine pumps oil there will be soot on the spark plug points, especially if the plugs are not hot enough for the particular motor, somehow seem to overlook the fact that soot can also be the result of a too rich carburetor mixture.

"I recently ran across a comparatively new engine which was fouling its plugs. I knew this couldn't be due to oil pumping. So I checked the carburetor float level and found it much too high. That was causing an overrich mixture. In another case I looked into the carburetor air intake, after taking off the air cleaner, and found that the choke wasn't opening fully when the engine warmed up. This also provided too rich a mixture. By making this simple observation I saved the owner the expense of new plugs, and cut his gas bill, too."

Many serious mistakes are made through careless reading of the oil level with the aid of the bayonet or stick type of oil level-gauge. Chief error is assuming that if the stick is well covered with oil when withdrawn for inspection there is plenty of oil in the crankcase. The gauge should, of course, be wiped off and then inserted to get a true reading. But, in addition, the car must be on level ground with the engine switched off. Sufficient time should have elapsed to have allowed oil to drain back into the motor pan, or sump as it is technically called. Be sure to insert the stick all the way. See that the opening around the stick is clean. Many service men prefer to take two readings just for safety's sake.

Automotive inventors, not satisfied with the present design of cars, are up to their necks in new ideas. While there is much activity in the line of torque converters (devices to make transmissions automatic) there still is plenty of interest in the little things that make or break one's motoring pleasure. A newly patented wiper, for instance, features a spray nozzle for releasing a solvent in the wiper operative zone. If you have been wondering why the starter always goes off with such a disconcerting bang you'll be interested in a new one which is designed with a resilient torque transmitting member to provide a cushion for starter action. Then there's a newly patented tire with cords in the tread to hold it against radial expansion.

Take care not to indulge in any of the practices that result in weakening pistons so that their tops break off. One to avoid is a back-fire. This always strains a piston because it is an effort on the part of the gas to force the piston to go the wrong way.

Pistons sometimes break after careless cutting of the ring grooves either to clean them of carbon or to cut them deeper to fit oversize rings. But overheating is still the leading cause of such breakage. If the pistons start to seize in their cylinders naturally the strain will tend to weaken the pistons. Baffling to many is the fact that the breakage may not occur until some time after the strain.

One for the Book
When the engine starts "loping" and you know that it is suffering from an over-rich mixture the chances are that you will first of all

TIRES ARE RATION-FREE!

No more certificates! Once again every one is eligible to buy, and soon you'll be able to drive in and get immediate delivery on new tires for your car.

PRODUCTION OUTLOOK AT A GLANCE

Tire manufacturers have been unable to fill the great need for new passenger car tires. In case we do not have the right size tire for your car, we should be able to get it soon. Come in for full information.

HERE'S WHY you'll want the B. F. Goodrich Silvertown OUTWEARS PREWAR TIRES!

It has been proved. More than 2,000 tests and nearly 17,000,000 miles of the toughest kind of road service showed that this new B.F. Goodrich Silvertown will Outwear Prewar natural rubber tires.

New, better rubber. B.F. Goodrich has developed a rubber that's far better than ordinary synthetics. It helps the new Silvertown wear better and run cooler. It has greater resistance to cracking—and actually stands bruising and damage from accidents better.

Tire body 35% stronger. An entirely new, stronger cord is used, more of these cords are used in the top ply, an extra shock-absorbing breaker strip is included. The result: a body that is 35% stronger for additional resistance to bruises, extra blowouts protection.

Flatter tread covers more ground. Called the "road level" tread, it puts more rubber on the road, permits all the tread to share the wear. Result: a further increase in mileage, less scuffing, better distribution of weight, better traction, more safety on the turns.

Plus 3 years' EXTRA experience. Three years before any other manufacturer, B.F. Goodrich sold tires containing synthetic rubber to American car owners. The extra know-how piled up in these years is reflected in the new B.F. Goodrich Silvertown.

"The Place to Go for the Recaps You Know"

APPLIED WITH A MINIMUM OF HEAT FOR MAXIMUM WEAR

Reel Recaps have kept countless thousands of trucks and cars operating throughout the war years and are continuing to do so during the reconversion period. They are the next best thing to a new General Tire. In many cases our Recaps furnished more mileage than did the original new tread. Only 10% of a tire's rubber is used for the tread... so... if the carcass is good the tire is still 90% serviceable... all it needs is that you have the smooth tread replaced by a sturdy, deep, long-wearing Recap. We apply them in 9 hours when necessary. Best materials and workmanship used, always.

Register Now for Your New General Tires

New tires are not coming through as rapidly as was expected at first. As soon as we can get new Generals we will be glad to sell them to you. We will play no favorites. If you register your name and tell us the size and number of new Generals you require we will see that you get them in the order of your registration. This may place them on your rims months before they would be there otherwise.

suspect that the carburetor's float level is too high. You will then check the choke valve to make sure it fully opens when the engine is hot. Then you will suspect that the carburetor float needle valve doesn't seat. If, after changing the needle valve, checking the choke and making sure that the float level is correct, you still have the trouble take a reader's word for it and start to suspect the fuel pump. Ordinarily when a fuel pump cuts capers it loses pressure, but in his case just the opposite developed. Pressure tested at seven pounds. That forced the needle valve off its seat and overfilled the float chamber.

Handy Way to Test

My hat is off to the motorist who, in casting about for reasons why his car's engine was so sluggish starting, thought of the idea of disconnecting the low tension wire at the coil and then using the starter. By this simple change no current was being used for ignition, everything being reserved for the process of cranking. He noticed a marked increase in engine cranking speed. It was his tip-off that there was too high resistance in the battery to starter-motor cable. Replacing this he found that the engine cranked still faster, even with the ignition functioning.

Have You a Question?

Q. Have just replaced bearing inserts and installed new piston rings with expanders, yet the oil pressure is lower than before the job. Even replacing the spring of the oil relief valve has not helped. Do you suggest a new oil pump? P. K.

A. The chances are that the new rings are so tight they drag on the cylinder walls, thin down the oil and lower the pressure. Give the car a thousand miles more breaking in before considering the oil pump.

Q. Why is it I never get heat from the hot water heater in my car even though the shut-off valve is wide open? C. M. C.

A. There should be another valve on the return line from the heater. Open that, too. Also make sure there is enough coolant in the radiator. The heater may also be mounted too high.

Q. On a long pull there is a lot of white smoke coming out of the vent on the clutch housing. What would cause this? W. L. L.

A. This is steam. Check for a water leak into the clutch housing from the rear of the engine. This may be due to a leak at the rear of the head gasket or around a rear core plug of the motor block.

Q. My car has developed a "clang" in the drive shaft when I shift from reverse to low, or if the engine isn't running evenly as when it is cold. What attention does this need? L. M. B.

A. This indicates a little excess of backlash, or "play," in the drive line, and possibly in the rear end gears. Of course when you shift from reverse to low, or vice versa, you aggravate this because you are making the shaft reverse itself. If this gets worse better have the universal joints checked. Care in handling the clutch will keep the "clanging" under fair control.

Mr. Russell will answer questions regarding the safe care and operation of your car. Just address him at 254 Fern Street, Hartford, Connecticut, and enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope for a personal reply.

Deserted Assembly Line

There the canine pets which came from hundreds of homes all over the U. S. were trained to become one-man animals, alert for the slightest movement of an enemy, ready to attack all upon their master's order.

Toughest job at the camp was that of the men who played the "enemy." Dressed in heavy padded garments the men would deflect with padded arms the leap of the dogs for their throats. Because of the danger inherent in the work none of the dog's attack training was given at night.

Off For Italy

While the dog was attacking the "enemy," the soldier was firing .45 caliber blanks directly into the faces of the on-rushing canines.

Just as the army's basic training separated the men from the boys, so too did the training at Fort Robinson separate the dogs from the pups.

Despite their work around gun fire many of the dogs were unable to stand up in actual combat under the strain of continual artillery fire, Logan recalls. "But then," he adds, "a lot of men couldn't stand up under the continuous noise of the heavies so why should one expect dogs to do better."

The 37th Dog Platoon was then formed and Logan, along with 19 other enlisted men, an officer and 24 dogs went to Italy. In Italy the outfit was attached to the 10th Division. During the long and grueling campaign the canine platoon was sent back to rest for only five days.

Got Little Rest

But the group did find some time to rest. They moved their quarters back about a half-mile from the actual front and each week a new squad, four scout dogs, two messenger dogs and their men, went into the front for actual combat work.

The dogs took part only on reconnaissance patrols and during them the man with the dog was in full charge, whether he was a T-5 or of higher rank.

In the daytime the master of the dog would go to a high hill overlooking the route he was to travel that night, and spy out his route of march. At dusk, the patrol, led by the dog, would enter the German territory. At dawn it would return. Logan often had patrols four nights in a row.

"But that really knocked you to pieces. It wasn't the patrol so much as waiting for it to start and thinking about what could have happened after you had returned from the patrol," the Gettysburg soldier points out.

Found Nazi Positions

Duke would lead, stop, sniff, and back up to Logan, pointing out the direction the Germans lay. Then the party would work on up higher into the mountains, searching for new German positions. Later they would come back by another route and report on where the Germans were placed on the hill ahead.

Reconversion of the dogs to civilian life is working out well, except for dogs who were 7 or 8 years of age when they entered the corps.

Logan says. Many of the older dogs will be unable to become friendly to everyone again and will probably have to be shot. The reconversion training includes taking the dog into crowds, playing with it, allowing all kinds of strangers to pat it and talk to it.

"There's only one trouble. When the dog gets through all it wants to do is play; and it just won't take orders, they'll have to be trained all over again to behave as good civilian dogs. But when the course is over they really are friendly to people—or they don't get home."

Logan's wife, Evelyn, is proprietor of the Vivian Beauty Parlor on Chambersburg street.

Lancaster, Pa., Feb. 9 (P)—Six trolleys and four buses broke through picket lines Friday in another attempt of the strike-bound Conestoga transportation company to resume operations with volunteer drivers led by former GI's.

Approximately 100 townspeople crowded a church lawn across the street to watch club-wielding policemen push pickets aside as the vehicles emerged from the company car barn.

'Cannibal Morals,' Charged To Nazis

Nuernberg, Feb. 9 (P)—Demanding the certain punishment of Hermann Goering and 20 other Nazi leaders, a Red Army general charged before the International Military Tribunal today that the defendants had developed "the morals of cannibals and the greed of burglars in an entire generation of Germans."

Twice within the first five minutes of his opening statement to the tribunal, Soviet Chief Prosecutor L. Gen. Roman Andreivich Rudenko called for "just retribution and severe punishment" for the men who directed "a mechanism for the extermination of millions of innocent people."

Rudenko asserted that "all of Germany's aggressive actions against a number of European states during the period between 1938 and 1941 were actually only preliminary measures for the main blow in the east." He quoted German General

Washington, Feb. 9 (AP)—The War Department announced Friday President Truman has decided to take no action on a clemency plea from Lt. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, condemned Japanese leader.

CORONER'S JURY

(Continued from Page 1) all aged 18 to 20 years and all of Gettysburg, who were riding in the rear seat of the Coston car, were called to the stand. Catherine Bucher said the Fitez lights were so bright she had to close her eyes.

Edward Hughes, Gettysburg taxi driver, who was following 300 feet to the rear of Fitez when the crash occurred confirmed Fitez' estimate of his speed and said each car appeared to be in its proper lane of the highway as they approached.

Mrs. Charles Evans, who had seen the Emmitsburg couples as they left the Moose home about midnight, said they were not intoxicated.

Mr. Kump was ill and could not attend the inquest but Pvt. Yercavage read the jury Kump's statement. He had been looking out a side window and did not see Coston's approach but recalled Fitez mentioning the bright lights.

The jury in the case included Frank Mumper, William I. Shields, Levi Deardorff, C. C. Culp, Donald Hammers and Hugh C. McIlhenny.

During the summer of 1941 while she was teaching and giving concerts at Bay View, Mich., a telegram came from New York asking if she would sing an audition for the New York Opera Company.

She came east and tried out for the part of Lady Macbeth in the from the restaurant and gave a cabbie the West Side address of Markio's.

She had somehow managed to bring a pair of valuable emeralds into this country. He knew that he was dying and he was afraid for their safety, so he gave them to your son. The explosion, Mr. Germaine, was no accident. It was purposely set to cover the theft of the emeralds by a group of men who let nothing stand in the way of acquiring something they want. They wanted the emeralds your son had, so he was murdered.

"Then why not arrest them as a group?"

"That is just what I don't want to do, Mr. Germaine."

"In heaven's name, why? On the face of it, they seem collectively guilty."

"The situation is a good deal more complicated than that. You see there is more than one group involved, or rather a group and an individual. At this moment it would be impossible to settle actual guilt on any one of them. Arrest them all and the chances are you'll lose them all."

Germaine looked at Rush grimly. "I'm paying you to know your business, Henry. I'll continue to believe that my trust in you is justified. But heaven help you if the guilty one escapes."

"Before I leave," Rush said, "there are several things I'd like to clean up."

"Yes?" said Germaine.

"First, have you any idea where Paul might have hidden the emeralds?"

Germaine wrinkled his brow in thought. "I'm continually surprised and sorrowed, Henry, at how little I know about my son. I can only think of the obvious places. His room, a deposit box, some such place."

Rush hesitated. "I seem to spend my visits here searching your house," he said. "But may I search Paul's room?"

Germaine rang for Horace and the ancient butler showed Rush to the second-floor door of Paul Germaine's room.

In the short half hour he spent in Paul Germaine's room he exhausted every possible hiding place short of a secret panel, and even that he insured against by a circuit of the walls and floor, tapping for a hollow space. He found absolutely nothing. He hadn't, in fact, expected to find anything. He had no idea where the younger Germaine had hidden his treasure, but he had a feeling it would be in a less expected place than his own room.

His search completed, Rush left with only a word through the door to Germaine that his labor had been fruitless. Rather than call a cab he walked the distance to the Drive, thinking as he went. He had walked only a matter of steps on the Drive before a cruising cab had alongside and Rush got in, giving the address of Barney's.

It was too late even to be fashionable when he decided to find dinner. He dawdled over that meal, reading the paper and finding a half column on page two that the police knew nothing they hadn't known the afternoon before. It was after ten o'clock when he emerged revival of Verdi's "Macbeth." On October 24, 1941, Fritz Busch conducted the opening performance. Miss Kirk won a personal ovation. Success crowned success. Arturo Toscanini heard of the young dramatic soprano, asked her to give an audition for him. The result was two-fold.

Twice With Toscanini On January 9 and 10, 1942, with the Philadelphia Orchestra under Maestro Toscanini, she was soprano soloist in Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream" music, a performance afterwards recorded for Victor. On April 22 and May 3, 1942, she was soloist again under Toscanini, first in Beethoven's Missa Solenne, then in the Ninth Symphony, the opening and closing works of the historic Beethoven Festival which was the culmination of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Society's gala Centennial Year.

South America heard the news of the young North American singer—and the continent's two leading opera houses bid for her, an unprecedented honor for a young American singer. July, 1942, found her starring in "Macbeth," specially revived for her by the Teatro Colon of Buenos Aires, the Argentine's world-renowned opera house. Here she also sang Alda, and Leonora in "Trovatore." August and September saw her at Brazil's greatest opera house, the Teatro Municipal of Rio de Janeiro, again singing such major roles of the Italian repertoire as Alda, Leonora, Amelia in "Masked Ball," Donna Anna in "Don Giovanni" and Maria in "Simon Boccanegra."

MONDAY AND TUESDAY
"She Wouldn't Say Yes," Columbia pictures' new comedy starring Rosalind Russell and Lee Bowman, will have its initial local showing at the Majestic theatre Monday.

The picture is said to give not only the stars every opportunity for hilarious behavior, but also to furnish the supporting cast with neat and tight bits of characterization seldom found in a story of this type.

Featured are Adele Jergens, Charles Winniger, Harry Daventport and Sara Haden. Others in the cast include Percy Kilbride, Lewis Russell, Mary Treen, Mabel Paige, George Cleveland and Almira Sessions. Virginia Van Upp produced and collaborated on the screenplay.

WEDNESDAY
The excitement of horse racing, the novel comedy device of four college professors concocting a system to beat the ponies, and the romance that blossoms when a young sportsman walks into his hotel room to find that a ravishing redhead has taken it over and intends to stay, combine to make "She Went to the Races," coming to the Majestic screen, surefire entertainment for the most choosy moviegoer.

James Craig appears as a turfman torn between beautiful but bookish Frances Gifford and gorgeous but predatory Ava Gardner. Reginald Owen, Edmund Gwenn, Charles Halton and Sie Ruman appear as a quartet of professors who need money for research and go to the Santa Anita race track to get it.

THURSDAY, FRIDAY, SATURDAY

Barbara Stanwyck as she is seen in her latest picture, "My Reputation."

The warmly moving story of a beautiful woman's desperate search for happiness, is grippingly told in Warner Bros.' latest film drama, "My Reputation," which opens Thursday at the Majestic theatre. Starring Barbara Stanwyck, the film features a generally excellent company of supporting players including George Brent, Lucile Watson, Warner Anderson, John Ridgely and Eve Arden.

"My Reputation" relates the heart-rending saga of one woman's second chance at love and of the vicious scandal that brings heartache into her life and the life of her family. As Jess Drummond, attractive young widow, mother of two lovable boys, Barbara Stanwyck plays another highly dramatic role of the sort which added her rise to fame.

Recollections of the 1920 Republican National Convention and events leading up to the Harding nomination.

he got up to leave he took an envelope from his pocket and, tossing it across the table to me, said: "There's a little holiday remembrance for you." It contained a $500 Liberty Bond.

The week following he failed rapidly, and while New Year's Eve revelers were celebrating in the ballroom of the Wardman Park Hotel, upstairs, directly over them, in the Penrose apartment, there was passing out with the Old Year, at the stroke of twelve, one of the ablest and most misunderstood public men of his time. By 7 o'clock the next morning, Sunday, I was on my way to the Penrose home in Philadelphia with all that remained of the best friend any man ever had.

Barricaded In Home
Because the Penrose funeral did not follow the customary procedure many fantastic stories were written about it. All funerals in the Penrose family have been held in the strictest privacy, and that of the Senator was no exception. No members of the family lived in the old ancestral mansion on Spruce Street. It was always ready for occupancy, being completely furnished, and manned by a staff of servants. The Senator and his brothers maintained it for sentimental reasons, and as a sort of family headquarters. When convenient or necessary it provided accommodations for them in lieu of a hotel. It was to this large, roomy, ghost-like, old house, of a bygone period, that the body of the late Senator was taken on Sunday, New Year's Day, 1922, and where it remained until the following Thursday awaiting the arrival of the third surviving brother, Spencer Penrose, of Colorado Springs, Colorado.

I was asked to remain in the house with the body (the only other occupants being the servants, quartered in a wing far distant), and not to venture outside until after the funeral. The servants were directed not to answer the door under any circumstances, and no one was to answer the telephone but me. Hundreds of messages to the family, of grief and sympathy, poured in from friends and admirers throughout the United States, and I, too, received countless messages on the loss of my good friend and employer. As no one could gain entrance to the house these communications were not delivered until after the funeral. I shall quote only one of them, that of President Harding to the Senator's brothers:

The President's Message
(Telegram)
"The White House, Washington, D. C., January 1, 1922.

"I have been greatly shocked and deeply grieved to learn of the sudden death of your distinguished brother, Senator Penrose. The shock is all the greater since it is only a few days ago that he expressed the hope, during a personal call at the White House, that he soon expected to give his full energies to the solution of pending public problems. From my long acquaintance, and my term of public service, with him, I came to have a very high regard for his exceptional ability and his fine estimate of public duty. His personal side was one of great delight to all who knew him well."

WARREN G. HARDING.

While quoting from the President, the following letter from him to me, dated January 12, 1922, may be of interest:

"The White House, Washington, January 12, 1922.

My dear Mr. Taylor:

In clearing up some mail on my desk I find that under date of December twenty-ninth, and posted at 9 P. M. on December thirty-first, Senator Penrose wrote me about a matter of politics in which he was interested.

It only calls to mind, whether the signature is actually his, how sturdily he held his head up and faced the future with unconquerable courage and hopefulness. Somehow I place a special value on this letter, even though I am aware that he may have had precious little participation in either its dictation or signing. I merely wanted you to know that I have noted it with care and interest.

Very sincerely,
WARREN G. HARDING."

Mr. Leighton C. Taylor, Washington, D. C.

With his manifold responsibilities and duties he took time out to write me this letter. What a kind, thoughtful, and humane person he was!

With the Penrose house almost hermetically sealed, and forbidden to see or communicate with anyone, I spent one of the gloomiest and saddest weeks of my life. I could hear the celebrated Philadelphia Mummers' Parade passing up Broad Street, nearby, but could not see it because of the shuttered windows. One of the Penrose brothers would pay me a daily visit to check on how I was getting along, and to inquire whether the servants were keeping me comfortable. Beyond this I was absolutely alone with the lifeless remains of the man with whom I had lived and worked for the past 18 years. It was an indescribable experience, and I would not care to repeat it.

Pending the day of the funeral,

Culture Of Bellflowers
Through the long and busy years of war and its attendant economic strain, many families, urban as well as rural, have allowed appearance to be sacrificed for utility in the home grounds. But now that conditions are returning toward a more normal level, it is essential that ornamentation receive again the emphasis it merits in daily living. In choosing flowers for planting this spring the well-known but frequently overlooked Campanulas or Bellflowers demand prominent consideration. They are easy to grow, quite hardy, and all of them bring a wealth of beauty as their rewards.

Beginners are often confused among the several species and varieties of Campanulas listed in seed and nursery catalogues. First, therefore, it is necessary to straighten out the common confusion of names and strains.

Campanula medium is commonly called Blue Bells of Scotland or Harebell. Campanula glomerata and C. pyramidalis are both excellent members, the latter often known as Chimney Bellflower. C. persicifolia is called Peach Bells and is often deemed one of the best forms. In fact, beginners will make few mistakes in choosing any species or varieties listed in catalogues of reputable seed firms and nurseries.

Most members of this floral group produce white or blue flowers, with one strain of Canterbury Bell a light pink. Too, the less widely known Coventry Bells (C. trachelium) has light purple flowers, while C. macrantha bears purplish to lilac shades of bloom.

Asuncion, capital of Paraguay, was founded in 1536.

Australia has been isolated longer than any other great land mass.

Bellflowers may be started from seed, root divisions or from rooted florist plants. Seed may be sown under glass in early March or in out-door beds in late April or early May, also in late June and early July.

The biennial Canterbury Bells should be started under glass in late winter or outdoors after the soil is warm. Plants from late winter grown seedlings will bloom some of the first summer, with their full glory coming the second summer.

The perennial sorts continue productive several years, although they demand separating every third year to prevent root crowding. This restriction can be observed in a decline in bloom vigor and a decrease in bloom numbers. Early spring root divisions provides many additional plants.

Roots or rooted plants should be set 8 to 12 inches apart in the perennial border, with dwarf sorts grown closer in colonies for maximum effects.

All Campanulas demand a well drained, fairly deep loam with plenty of moisture-holding organic matter to a depth of several inches. If manure is used to improve heavier or shallow soils, it should be thoroughly composted, finely pulverized and spaded under at least four weeks before plants are set out.

Most dwarf Campanulas like partial shade while taller sorts thrive best in full sun. If afforded a location where they do not have to compete with the roots of trees and heavy shrubs, members of this fine genus will bring rare beauty of form and color to dress up the post-war home grounds.
